

Nuria Rodríguez Fariñas

ORCID iD 0000-0003-4476-0493

Associate Professor of University of Castilla-La Mancha

NURIA RODRÍGUEZ FARIÑAS got her PhD Degree in Chemistry at the University of Castilla-La Mancha in 2004 and she is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Environmental Sciences and Biochemistry at the University Castilla-La Mancha (Toledo, Spain) since 2017. Her research interests are mercury speciation in environmental samples, metallomics studies in animal tissues and, more recently, analytical nanotechnology. She has got wide expertise in chromatographic techniques coupled to optical and mass spectrometry detectors.

She is co-author of more than 20 research articles, two chapters of book and several contributions to national and international conferences. She has participated in research projects of European, national, regional and university funding, being principal investigator on two of them. She has supervised one Ph.D. thesis, 2 Master thesis and several degree thesis.